

Atlantian EA is not using any martingale strategy. My Expert advisor is using averaging strategy. Averaging is a way to hedge an opened trading position in order to correct (move) the entry point. In other words, averaging is used who are trying to find an ideal entry point. Not gambling unlike martingale system. In this way of adding to a position, you don't close any intermediate orders, you just expect the final result, and in particular, when the price reaches the initial level of the position opened.

Atlantian EA is using CCI indicator or Commodity Channel Index The CCI is a market indicator used to track market movements that may indicate buying or selling in any timeframe.

OTHERS:

- Easy to use and supervise, good for newbie.
- Best works for ECN Broker with zero spread
- Works for XAUUSD and Major pairs
- Customizable indicator settings
- Built-in money management

The EA operates as per the CCI indicator:

- Buy when CCI crosses over 100
- Sell when CCI crosses below -100

Additionally, it implements four different money management modes:

- Trade manual lotsize: The EA will trade a fixed lotsize on each trade
- Auto-calculation of lotsizes: The EA will risk % of the account on each trade

Input Parameters

- Indicator Settings - Enter your desired CCI input parameters.
- Money Management -In this settings block you can set the lotsize for the first trade, or allow the EA to calculate it by itself. Entering a manual lot size is recommended.
